The fate and future of every society and the people living in it is closely related to the education of the youth, who are considered the leading forces of the states. One of the main goals of the state policy on youth education in our country is to lead the next generation to spiritual maturity in all aspects and to make them intellectual and creative. After all, educating competent, goal-oriented and energetic young people who have modern knowledge and skills and can take responsibility for the decent future of the country is one of the most pressing issues today. In this regard, there are important requirements for teachers, coaches and educators to fulfill such difficult and responsible tasks.

Pedagogical activity in society is not only a profession of imparting knowledge, but it should fulfill the higher purpose of forming a person and forming humanity. From this point of view, the pedagogic profession should be recognized as the labor activity of people who are responsible to the people and the state in preparing the young generation for life and work, and who have specially prepared for this work. On the way to future development, he must love children, desire and ability to give himself to them, be a model of intelligence, be spiritually rich and cultured, be a true master of his profession, have innovative directions in scientific and pedagogical thinking, be able to create innovations and preparation for making creative decisions, feeling the need to improve one's knowledge, being physically and mentally healthy, professional must be fit for work [1].

A teacher should be a true creator of work in teaching and educating young people, and if he can establish a sincere pedagogical relationship with them, he will be able to achieve good goals and desired results in pedagogical activities. In this regard, the opportunities created by our state for young people are the greatest help in solving the responsible tasks such as the development of family education, the revival of the age-old dreams of our people and ensuring the peace and tranquility of the country. It is a sign of self-sacrifice that a teacher is devoted to his profession and able to contribute to the education of the young generation for the development of the country in the direction of these goals.

It is known that the current state of the development of science in the world, especially in the society where modern information technologies are widely introduced in this regard, the rapid updating of knowledge in various fields of science, puts the task of regular and independent search for knowledge in addition to their rapid acquisition. In order to solve such tasks, it is possible to achieve optimization of the educational process by applying educational skills from new information technologies to the creation of content, modern methods of collecting, storing and transferring data and information based on them, which are widely used in practice today. Also, in the system of family relations, parents should not forget that they are responsible for educating young people in the manners and morals of young people as a person rich in moral qualities, disciplined and strong-willed, in harmony with national and universal values [2].

It is precisely the achievement of intellectual, spiritual and moral maturity of today's young people that is integrally dependent on the pedagogical team and mutual pedagogical assistance in family education. Pedagogical assistive technology is a system of using one's own emptiness and one's own strength - physical, intellectual, spiritual, creative means - that helps a growing person to realize his difference from others. Implementation of this technology begins with the student's question: "Who am I?", "How should I be?". Discussing these questions together with the teacher raises another independent question: "How to live in life?". Through specially organized consultations in the family or in educational institutions, the individual way of life characteristic of this particular student is gradually formed, studied, and the ideas about noble life goals are instilled into the mind and heart of each young generation.

With the help of a pedagogue, the student finds suitable ways to cope with success and misfortune, determines the appropriate type of work, forms of continuous work in his free time, and the characteristics of relationships with people. Also, in the course of family relations, pedagogical support, correcting and evaluating the child's activities: "good, bad", "right-wrong", "impossible", etc. determine the scope of their behavior at a certain age stage. This method is more effective for students of junior school age, where the teacher's reputation is not yet very strong.

The preparation of young people for future life and vocational training is based on various activities of the teacher, including teaching young people, organizing and conducting educational activities outside of school and classroom, conducting pedagogical propaganda among parents, etc. All this requires the teacher to have deep knowledge, to love his field and children [3]. In this regard, the success of the teacher in his practical work depends on how well he correctly identified the causes of the child's behavior, how well he correctly expressed the specific pedagogical goal based on the reasons for the behavior, how well he chose the optimal methods of achieving his goal, and how skillfully he was able to implement them in the real pedagogical process.

Indeed, the issue of education and upbringing is very important. Especially today, at a time when information dissemination has reached a limitless level, if we are indifferent to the issue of youth education and development, if we pay attention to the education and upbringing of our children, if we do not take measures to protect the national image in their spirituality, then tomorrow we will only explain that "this is wrong, this is impossible". It's good it is clear that he will not. A negative impact on spiritual education should be considered a betrayal of our tomorrow, the future of our nation. Therefore, today, when the problem of raising our young people to become truly enlightened and highly cultured people is facing us, protecting them from the negative effects of foreign ideas, customs and traditions promoted on the Internet, as well as the display of ignorance and barbarism, as our great grandfather said, is truly it is a matter of life or death. So, as a conclusion, it can be said that in our society, it is necessary to pay serious attention to the education of young people and to bring them to maturity as knowledgeable, well-rounded children, and to have a systematic and consistent, purposeful approach to their education from an early age. Improving the socio-spiritual environment, especially in the neighborhoods, in every family, increasing the attention and responsibility of parents to raising children, meaningful organization of their children's free time is the guarantee of peace and tranquility of our future life.
